City Officials Add Insult to Injury around Amidon-Bowen Construction Project

DCPS & DGS apologize to longtime ANC Commissioner and other SW residents for offensive comments

BY MIKE GOODMAN

On Thursday, Dec. 15, officials from DC Public Schools (DCPS) and the DC Department of General Services (DGS) briefed the Local School Advisory Team (LSAT) of Amidon-Bowen Elementary School (ABES) regarding an upcoming, major construction project at the school. An LSAT exists for every DCPS school, and is a committee of parents, teachers, school staff, and a community member who volunteer their time to help the school, and are elected by the school community.

During the virtual meeting, parents and Advisory Neighborhood Commissioner (ANC) Marjorie Lightman (6D01) pressed the city officials about a lack of

NASA’s Artemis Crew III Visits Amidon-Bowen Elementary School

BY MATTHEW KOEHLER

Christmas came a little early last month when some very special guests visited the students at Amidon-Bowen Elementary School in Southwest DC. These were no ordinary, terrestrial guests - each one of them were NASA astronauts who had spent time beyond the borders of Earth’s atmosphere. One of them, Colonel Raja Chari (U.S. Air Force ret.), had spent six months up on the International Space Station. All the visiting astronauts are part of the Artemis III crew that will once again put humanity on the surface of the moon.

“Would you like to fly in space?” NASA Administrator and former astronaut Bill Nelson asked the packed gymnasium of elementary students. The whole gymna-

Welcome to the house on the corner! Living Classrooms Foundation National Capital Region, James C. Dent House Community Center in Southwest Washington is a District Landmark in Black history here in Washington, DC. The Dent House was designated a DC Landmark by the city’s Historic Preservation Review Board in 2010.

More than a century ago, Reverend James C. Dent commissioned and built this two-story brick house on the corner of 2nd and Q Streets SW, where our community center is now located. James Clinton Dent was born into slavery in Charles County, Maryland, in July 1855 and presumably gained his freedom when Maryland abolished slavery in 1864. In the 1870s, he came to Washington, one of tens of thousands of Blacks who migrated to the capital after the Civil War looking to create a new life. He married, and worked as a laborer. According to the 1880 census, he could read and write.

In 1885 his wife Mary, a member of Mt. Moriah Baptist Church, which moved to Capitol Hill, a large corner lot for himself four blocks south of his church, just across James Creek from the US Army War College. He commissioned a leading White architect, William James Palmer, to design a freestanding, two-story brick house. More of Palmer’s work was in North-West Washington, and that very year, the Washington Post praised his homes in Mt. Pleasant for their “architectural beauty, stability, and refinement of taste.” Although the Dent house was far from grand, it was the foremost brick home in the largely empty area scattered with shacks and small wood-frame houses.

Sadly, Reverend Dent did not get to enjoy his beautiful new home for long, as he passed away in 1908. With no children, his widow Mary took in boarders to stay in the house for several years after his death. Reverend Dent’s legacy lives on, however, in the still vibrant Mt. Moriah Baptist Church, which moved to Capitol Hill when the federal government bought and razed the church building near 2nd and M Streets SW.

Reverend Dent secured a personal mortgage in 1906 and bought a larger corner lot for himself four blocks south of his church, just across James Creek from the US Army War College. The last thirty years of that important work were conducted from Reverend Dent’s home at 156 Q Street SW, after which Pepco bought and renovated the old building and offered a long-term lease to Living Classrooms to continue its long and honorable tradition of service. It is still remembered fondly by many neighborhood residents.

Living Classrooms Foundation is very proud to be walking in the footsteps of Reverend Dent and some of the nation’s most prominent Black Americans of the early 20th century. We are working hard every day to carry on their historic legacy in our Southwest neighborhood.

Our community partners are Court Appointed Special Advocate (CASA), United Planning Organization, Good Projects, Metropolitan Police Department, PEPCO, Southwest Business Improvement District, Department of Employment Services, Department of Energy and Environment, to name a few.

For more information on Living Classrooms programs at the Dent House and elsewhere in the DC area, visit livingclassrooms.org or contact Karida Green at 202-488-0627 or kgreen@livingclassrooms-dc.org.

Southwest Neighborhood Assembly Introduces Dynamic Community Leaders

BY DONNA PURCHASE

Over the course of the coming year, we will introduce you to the dynamic Southwest Neighborhood Assembly (SWNA) Task Force Leaders. They are the engines that keep us running. If you are interested in joining a task force, visit https://swna.org/get-involved/.

Meet The Southwest Strong Leaders – Ben Curran & Regina Blye

Ben Curran
A native Washingtonian, Ben lives in Southwest DC where he leads SWNA’s grassroots disaster preparedness group called Southwest Strong! which is committed to building a disaster-resilient Southwest DC.

Ben Curran grew up in Iran, South Africa, Tanzania, England, Togo, and Australia. He began work with the international Rescue Committee in Sudan during the Ethiopian refugee crisis. Afterwards, he supported the American Red Cross as an Assistant Shelter Manager during the Central American refugee situation on the southwestern U.S. border.

With a Master of Science in International Community Economic Development, he joined the FEMA Response Operations Office. His disaster deployments included: hurricanes Hugo in Puerto Rico and Andrew in Louisiana; the Midwest floods in Kansas, Iowa and Illinois; the Northbridge earthquake in Los Angeles; Oklahoma City bombing; September 11th in Washington D.C.; Hurricane Katrina in Louisiana; Typhoon Soudelor in Saipan; Hurricanes Irma and Maria in the US Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico; COVID-19 FEMA headquarters response operations center in Washington D.C. Other overseas assignments included Operation Support Hope - Rwanda Genocide with the Office of Foreign Disaster Assistance; Kobe earthquake; Hurricane Mitch; the Haiti earthquake and the Stability Pact in Hungary and Romania.

At FEMA, Ben served as the Deputy Branch Chief for Mass Care, Voluntary Agency Coordination and Community Services.

He enjoys neighborhood festivals, showing off the city to visitors (especially international visitors), DC murals, the WPFW radio station, Ben’s Chili Bowl and all the funky DC Ethiopian buna beats.

Regina Blye, Co-Chair, Southwest Strong

Regina Blye is a dynamic “advocrat” committed to high-impact systems change. She targets public policy reform to improve the quality of life for people with disabilities by removing barriers to education, employment, healthcare, transportation, and housing. For ten years, she served as the Executive Director of a statewide nonprofit that promotes the independence and integration of Texans with disabilities into a community of their choice. Her advocacy led to President Barack Obama appointing Regina to serve on the United States Access Board for over six years. As a board member, she was responsible for developing accessibility guidelines and standards for the American with Disabilities Act (ADA) and the Architectural Barriers Act (ABA).

Regina gives back to the community by serving as an Ambassador for the Thelma D. Jones Breast Cancer Fund, Chair of the Southwest DC Community Center, Co-Chair of SWNA Southwest Strong! and as a board member of the DC State Fair. She believes in staying active, so you can catch her playing Wheelchair Rugby, teaching people to play Boccia, teaching Zumba, and playing music at community events.

District Protected Bike Lane Project Moves Forward in Southwest

The District Department of Transportation (DDOT) is installing new bike lanes in Southwest, resulting in construction through Winter 2023. The bike lanes are being installed along 4th Street SW from P Street SW to 1 Street SW, and on 1 Street SE/SW from 7th St SW to 4th St SE.

This project will reconfigure the street to include protected bike lanes and additional pedestrian crosswalks. The work will reposition lane lines but will not repave the street. DDOT is coordinating with electric utility PEPCO and will postpone installing protected bike lanes on the portion of 1 Street SW from 4th SW to Delaware Avenue SW during the installation of new capital grid powerlines under the street over the coming months.

The Southwester has previously reported on significant community input regarding this project, with community concerns around the dropoff/pickup zone at Amidon-Bowen Elementary School and a reduction in available street parking.

Citywide, DDOT has committed to a 206-mile network of on-street protected bicycle lanes to promote safe biking. There are currently 26 miles of protected bike lanes, with plans to build an additional 10 miles per year. According to the department, protected bike lanes have a proven safety effect on streets where they are installed, reducing crashes for all road users by 15%, or more when paired with additional safety treatments.

Seabins Pilot Marks One Year in the Water Capturing Plastics

Seabins are small trash traps designed especially for marinas by The Seabin Project, an Australian organization originally founded to reduce trash in Sydney. They were quickly adopted across Australia, Europe, and elsewhere in the past three years, and were just starting to pop up around the United States when Anacostia Riverkeeper won a 2021 grant from the District Department of Energy and Environment (DOEE) with funding from the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to pilot Seabins in the District.

Seabins are particularly well suited to grabbing the many pieces of trash that persist in the relatively tight spaces between docks and bulkheads. They bolt directly on to floating docks and have a capture area about the size of a five-gallon bucket. Add some bracketing structure and a pump at the bottom, and you’ve got the idea. The pump draws water and trash into the basketed capture area where the trash gets stuck and the water passes down and back out to the river cleaner than it came in. The Seabins are currently installed at James Creek Marina and Yards Marina to capture trash and send clean water back out into the river.

The real solution, of course, is to stop using so much plastic, and to make sure that what plastic we have to use is able to be recycled more effectively than it is now. One big step in that direction will be for the District to adopt a beverage container deposit law. In the meantime, Anacostia Riverkeeper will keep running the Bandalang Litter Traps, and organizing cleanups. If you’d like to join us for a clean-up, the next one will be January 16th, 2023, when Anacostia Riverkeeper and Pope Branch Park Restoration Alliance host the Martin Luther King, Jr. Day Clean Waterways Cleanup from 10:00 a.m.-1:00 p.m. at Pope Branch Park. Please sign up here if you’ll be joining us: https://www.eventbrite.com/e/clean-waterways-cleanup-mlk-day-of-service-2023-tickets-470680537157. Anacostia Riverkeeper’s office has just moved to Barracks Row for most of 2023, and our mailing address is now 45 L St SW, PO Box #70565, Washington DC, 20024. The microplastics and beverage container deposit law reports mentioned above can be found at https://www.anacostiariverkeeper.org/resource-library/publications/.
National Museum of Asian Art Connects Environmental Art Across Centuries

BY SHEILA WICKOSKI

Two exhibits of Indian prints and photographs now on view at the Smithsonian Asian Art Museum go beneath the surface to consider the underlying themes of environment, politics and emotions. What the works from almost three millennia apart share in common is the importance of water as a cultural and economic necessity.

A Splendid Land Painting from Royal Udaipur (on view through May 14, 2023) is presented as a walk through the city and countryside, filled with sensorial experiences, and feelings of prosperity and belonging in an economy dependent on water from annual monsoons.

In the 18th century, Indian artists made some dramatic changes to their landscape traditions. Unlike the previous two millennia of poetic miniature art, these are monumental works celebrating the city’s architecture and countryside landscapes. Of the 51 works on display, five are on cotton paper with sunrise clouds billowing above the City Palace and its walls with green hills and lake. The king is hunting a tiger while his subjects are busy with morning activities. In Maharana Fateh Singh crossing a river during the monsoon (Shivalal, ca. 1893) captures the river swelling, rain splashing and lightning across the sky. An ambient soundscape enhances the experience.

Fast forward to Unstill Waters: Contemporary Photography from India (on view through June 11, 2023) and through city streets and landscapes with a focus on the Yamuna River in northern India and the endangered rivers in urban life. Riverbank I by Ravi Agarwal (2007) is a soaring image of the river.

In 2023, the National Museum of Asian Art marks the 100th anniversary of its founding, and these exhibits connect across time and space, reflecting modern concerns about environmental sustainability for all who live in riverfront cities and beyond.

Friends of Southwest DC and King-Greenleaf Recreation Center’s Coach Skip Honored at Brickie Awards

BY GUY ALDRIDGE

Award 6’s annual Brickies award ceremony returned to an in-person format at the Hill Center at the Old Naval Hospital on December 7 after two years of virtual ceremonies during the COVID-19 pandemic. The internet age, some workplaces and organizations are wondering if a “return to normal” is necessary or even desired. Ward 6 Councilmember Charles Allen and his staff responded last month by making sure the event was big and joyful.

Local businesses donated food and drinks and neighbors caught up with each other for more than an hour before the awards were presented. Satellite rooms with TVs were set up to provide enough capacity for all visitors to have enough elbow room in the standing-room only ceremony.

Award recipients were introduced by a video submitted by community members, brought to the podium to give a short speech, and given a ceremonial brick inscribed with each person or entity’s name and award. The five categories for 2022 were Neighbor Award, Community Organization Award, Business Award, Public Service Award, and Civic Pride Award.

Southwest was represented well at the 2022 Brickies. First on the agenda, the Friends of Southwest DC won the Community Organization Award for its grants to local organizations, which it is able to give thanks to grassroots fundraising efforts. In 2022, the organization awarded over $50,000 in grants to 16 local nonprofits, college scholarships, food pantries, and more.

Three award winners came from other corners of Ward 6. Jerome Jeffries, the “Mayor of 10th Street,” won the Neighbor Award for a variety of good deeds, such as helping neighbors roll back their trash cans, keeping packages safe, cleaning up leaves, and more.

The popular H Street NE watering hole The Queen Vic won the Business Award for not only its central place in the Northeast community, but its outreach and organizing during the pandemic. The Civic Pride Award was given to the Save Mott’s Market group, which organized to buy the building that housed a corner store on 12th Street SE when it closed after more than 100 years in business. Now the grassroots ownership group is working to renovate and reopen the store.

The Brickies concluded with Southwest’s own Nathaniel “Coach Skip” Green from the King-Greenleaf Recreation Center winning the Public Service Award. If the ceremony were a symphony, here it reached its crescendo. Many of Green’s family, friends, and players came to cheer for him and make sure the Hill Center was wall-to-wall.

Coach Skip was nominated due to his dedication to the community and the “deeply impactful, individual relationships with young people,” often in the face of “difficult” or “traumatic things,” Allen said. Green was tasked four years ago to get football started in Southwest with 25 players, he told the audience, and now there are over 600 kids participating in a variety of sports at King-Greenleaf.

After the ceremony concluded, Coach Skip reminded The Southwester that he isn’t the only one in his orbit dedicated to community service. In May and June 2021, his son, Nate Green, co-organized Southwest Sports on a Truck, a COVID-19-safe series of sporting events.

With the Brickies going strong after 16 years, with the Brickies going strong after 16 years, readers may make note of exceptional public service in the coming months to make nominations for the 2023 awards.
Breast Cancer Support Group Wraps Up 2022, Gathers to Ring in the New Year

BY SOUTHWESTER STAFF

There is a shared sentiment among the regular support group members of the Thelma D. Jones Breast Cancer Fund (TDJBCF) that the monthly meetings get better each month since inception in April 2010. Commencing at the Southwest Neighborhood Assembly’s conference room, the group eventually outgrew the space and relocated to St. Augustine’s Episcopal Church until the pandemic struck. Now, the TDJBCF meets monthly via Zoom and the TDJBCF Facebook live, missing only one meeting since its inception.

“I am always amazed at the expertise and background possessed by a growing list of outstanding guest speakers from Thelma’s vast network. I leave each meeting more inspired, educated, informed and hopeful for our future to finding a cure or at least reducing the incidence and mortality rates of breast cancer,” said Scarlett S. Small, advocate, TDJBCF ambassador and former long-time caregiver who has attended the meetings faithfully since 2014.

The December meeting, focusing on the theme “Children of Parents with Breast Cancer – living or deceased” was no exception as guest speaker Brea Hickson, MBA, Inflammatory Breast Cancer Survivor, courageously shared her journey and openly discussed the mental toll that it had on her, her loving and supportive spouse who is a military officer, and their three young children. Mistress of Ceremony Lashanah Thomas-Walker led the question-and-answer session effortlessly, providing a deeper understanding of IBC and Hickson’s overall message that early detection saves lives, knowledge is power and advocating for oneself is so important.

Other highlights of the meeting included three wonderful musical renditions and brief partnership presentations by the American Cancer Society Making Strides Against Breast Cancer and a surprise announcement from team Undaunted Determination led by TDJBCF Ambassador Sheri Denkensohn-Trott, JD, Breast Cancer Survivor and Co-Founder, Happy on Wheels, reporting on reaching this year’s goal of $8,000 and having reached the $100,000 mark in 12 years while proudly being supported by the TDJBCF. Rounding out the presentations were speakers representing two Georgetown University grants on self-acupressure and the impact of Covid-19, both grants included Black, African Americans and Latina breast cancer survivors, and DC Health Project WISH. To see the full meeting, visit https://www.facebook.com/TDJBreastCancerFund.

Looking ahead to the New Year, having an outstanding meeting at the end of the year is equally important as starting the year with a great meeting, as the January meeting sets the tone for the rest of the year. Join us on Wednesday, January 18, at 6:30 pm via Zoom and the TDJBCF Facebook Live as the TDJBCF is pleased to welcome back by popular demand to ring in the New Year Kristen Berzet-Harris, Host, Great Day Washington, WUSA9. Berzet-Harris will share her story and discuss the importance of early detection and screening, breast density and her outstanding advocacy work on a personal and professional level. To help set the tone of our monthly support group meetings for 2023, the TDJBCF welcomes Alejandra Hurtado de Mendoza, PhD, Georgetown University, as the Mistress of Ceremony. Mark your calendar and bring in the New Year’s with us! For more information on the TDJBCF, please visit www.tdjbreastcancerfund.org or email thelma@tdjbreastcancerfund.org.
Holiday Cheer Takes Over First Street with Winter Wonderland Celebration

BY SOUTHWESTER STAFF

The holiday celebration took as its theme Dr. Suess’ The Grinch, but there was only joy as children of all ages joined families and neighbors to mark the holidays at an outdoor Winter Wonderland festival held the weekend before Christmas. First Street SW between N Street SW and P Street SW was aglow with lights, music, booths, and a line wrapped around the block to take a picture with Santa.

Children had the chance to decorate cookies, snag a Grinch-themed gift bag and take home free books about Black and Brown baseball stars courtesy of the Washington Nationals. Other sports also made an appearance, as a group tossed a football back and forth in the street, which was blocked to vehicular traffic by the Metropolitan Police Department (MPD). A second Santa, courtesy of MPD, was pulled on a fire engine sleigh on a tour of the neighborhood that reached the base of Barracks Row on 8th Street SE.

The Winter Wonderland celebration was created by Christine Spencer, President of the James Creek Resident Council, and Rhonda Hamilton, President of Syphax Gardens Residents’ Council and Advisory Neighborhood Commissioner. Support came from across the community, including the Southwest BID and Reverend Peter Spann of Carron Baptist Church, which opened its doors during the festival to crowds eager to take a break from the action and the chilly winter weather.

Clean Off Your Bookshelves

BY KITTY FELDE

We’ve watched the ball drop in Times Square, cheered on our favorite teams in the Peach, Fiesta, Cotton, and Rose Bowl games, made and already forgotten our New Year’s Resolutions. But we get a second chance at starting the new year right: Chinese New Year is January 22.

In the days leading up to it, it is traditional to clean out your house. Former librarian Anne Bensfield says there’s a literary advantage to the new year: “This is a great time to declutter your bookshelves to make room for new favorites.”

Start with your own bookshelves. Discard books about ancient technology like that dusty copy of DOS for Dummies. Weed out duplicate copies of Isaac Asimov’s Foundation series (I’m talking to you, husband Tad...) Take that stack of books to a Little Free Library or your favorite charity thrift store, then give yourself permission to use that holiday gift card on the latest best seller.

Next, help your kids to organize their own bookshelves - by title, author, topic, color, or anything else that makes sense to them. Ask which book is their favorite and why. And then re-read it with them. I promise that it will give you new insights into what they’re thinking about, worried about, getting excited about. Then take the time to reread your own favorites. Rereading reminds us of our younger selves and allows us to recapture the passion we had for a particular book...and share it with that next generation. Pick a book you can part with and inscribe it to a younger reader, telling them why you think this particular book is perfect for them and what it meant to you. You can even wrap it in bright red paper to mark the Chinese New Year holiday. And then share that book with your young reader. A gift in late January will certainly stand out rather than be forgotten among the torn wrapping paper under the Christmas tree.

Chinese New Year gives us another opportunity for a fresh start on 2023 reading.

Kitty Felde is host and executive producer of the award-winning Book Club for Kids podcast. Her latest Nina Mendoza mystery State of the Union explains the State of the Union address and other civic topics to kids.

River of Words Poem

BY OLIVER TUTTLE (GRADE 4)

I live in River Park and I go to Amidon Bowen Elementary School. I’m honored to have been awarded the watershed explorer certificate this year for my watershed poem in the 2021-2022 RIVER OF WORDS contest. I was encouraged by my poet athlete/soccer team DC SCORES. They inspired me by the poetry skills they taught me and the teamwork they showed me. I would like to share my last poem with you today.

I’m looking forward to entering the RIVER OF WORDS contest next year.

Necessary Motion

BY OLIVER TUTTLE

I heard the water; it goes swish swish as loud as it can go. I heard the whale’s song; singing long and low. I saw the fish; they were flipping in the waves up ahead. I know this water comes from everywhere in the watershed.

Water flows somewhere, it goes to rivers, lakes, and oceans. Sometimes people ask, why do I care? Well, it’s a necessary motion.

Each watershed collects water in a larger body. These support habitats for me and you. But remember, it picks up everything, even potty. So, we have to have a long-term point of view.

I see trash through the water flow. Chemicals make it glow. So much to think of. This part of life we all love.

The ocean. It’s so cool and exciting! Oh, the sound of the waves; it’s so satisfying! I will do what I can to save it. Let’s look back on life and know the best is what we gave it.

Winners of 30th Annual Holiday Boat Parade Announced

BY SOUTHWESTER STAFF

On December 3, a parade of more than 60 boats decked out for the holidays floated down the Washington Channel, ending at The Wharf. A Southwest community tradition, the boat parade was founded by Southwest DC community member Barbara Ehrlich in 1992.

With corporate sponsors such as Washington Gas, the event has grown significantly in size, and brought crowds out in droves to decorate ornaments, enjoy hot chocolate, and take pictures with Santa Claus at the start of the holiday season.

The Wharf announced the following prize-winning boats and captains following the 2022 parade:

• Most Likely to Capsize: Vuletida Pride on dinghy Lucky Little Star – Captain Kelly Simon
• Best Crew: Who Doesn’t Love Holiday Mermaids on power boat SEKI-A – Captain Jason Kopp
• Most Ingenious Idea: Grandma Got Run Over By a Reindeer on powerboat Timeless Splash – Captain Hany Nasr
• Spirit of DC: From Odessa With Love on sail boat Tuesday – Captain Joe Landa
• Founder’s Award: Celebrating 30 Years of the Boat Parade on power boat Digger – Captain Bob Rose
• Waterfront Wow: Mario Brothers on sail boat Moovin’ – Captain Tom Cordell
• Best Motorboat: Christmas at The Wharf on power boat Kaitros - Captain Michael Bradfod
• Best Sailboat: A Charlie Brown Christmas on sail boat Dark Star – Captain Doug Savage
• 30th Anniversary Showstopper Award Presented by Oasis Marinas: Land Before Time on power boat Beer Hunter – Captain Christopher Johnson
• 3rd Place: Have a Chesapeake Bay Crabby Christmas on power boat Miss Behavin’ – Captain Kirt Barber
• 2nd Place: COVID Christmas on power boat Big Blind – Captain David Hays
• 1st Place: Celebrating 30 Years of the Boat Parade on power boat Digger – Captain Bob Rose
• Community Choice: COEXIST on power boat Santé – Captain Daniel Ricks
• Best in Parade: National Lampoons Christmas Vacation: Griswold House Lighting Ceremony on power boat Magical Knots – Captains Brian and Tonia Dollinger outreach to the community, the anticipated amount of noise due to the construction, the impact on students and teachers, whether there is ongoing communication with parents and school officials, and the safety of the students around construction vehicles. Midway through the virtual meeting, a city official inadvertently shared his computer screen, showing the private chat that the DGS and DCPS officials were having with each other during the meeting.

In response to a parent’s questions about how to ensure construction trucks have visibility to schoolchildren entering and exiting the school, and what actions are being taken to minimize interactions between children and construction trucks, a DCPS official privately chatted to the other city officials, “This is getting petty. None of us are transportation consultants. This is just petty. Lessons learned, you can share this with ANCP and David Margolis (LSAT) are power hungry bullies looking for fights.”

In addition, The Southwester obtained a video of the private chat, which also shows a DCPS official chatting to other city officials, “wow, that guy was rude,” as a parent referred to their computer screen.

A senior DGS official promptly deleted the comment.

After an initial delay, DGS also reached out and apologized to the Southwest resident who was accused by a DCPS official of being “rude.” According to a DCPS spokesperson, “DGS has reached out to the parent involved and worked with them on the Amidon Bowen Elementary School Project. We look forward to mutually respectful dialogue regarding this project and all other community engagements.”

The construction project itself has now been without controversy, primarily due to what residents perceive as a lack of transparency and a number of unanswered questions. The community initially welcomed the news that a Child Development Center would be added to the school, to accommodate infants and toddlers ages 0 to 3, as a part of DCPS’ “from birth-to-three initiative.” However, both the ANC and parent groups have been concerned with a lack of information about the impact of the construction on students and teachers. After some delays, the project was slated to begin on Monday, Dec. 19, while children are in school. Major construction is expected to continue well into next year, including during critical periods of student testing.

“I was happy to hear that Ami don was going to get additional space and new early childhood classrooms,” says Margolis. “However, the DCPS / DGS team provided the ABES LSAT with confusing and contradictory information, then radically sped up their reported construction timeline. We went from thinking they would break ground in September 2023 to hearing in November that they would break ground in September 2023. With Thanksgiving, that gave us very little time to get the word to parents, and administrators and staff were left scrambling to adjust safety plans around arrival, dismissal, and recess. We had a lot of questions to ask about noise, health, and other impacts and the team wasn’t answering us fast enough. We thought it was very unfair to the hardworking staff at ABES in particular.”

Commissioner Litsky also told The Southwester that a senior DCPS official reached out to him with an apology, but that was not his primary concern. “What I cannot abide is that our District Government is still going ahead with this project without complete written answers to some very basic questions from the ANC, Amidon Bowen parents, and the people of Southwest for the bumbling and unprofessional manner that this entire project has been handled so far,” says Litsky. “Just because the District Government is the ‘developer’ here they ought not to be any less responsive to the community. Were it up to me, this project would be paused until such time as those answers are forthcoming and definitively committed to the team.”

In fact, following the LSAT meeting and outreach from The Southwester and concerned parents and leaders, a DCPS spokesperson now tells The Southwester that the project will be paused. “DCPS will pause the upcoming work related to preparing the site for construction while we review and respond to the community’s concerns,” said a DCPS spokesperson on Dec. 17.

The path forward is now unclear, though parent advocates want to make sure the construction project does not end up impacting children this school year as well as next school year. We had a lot of questions to ask about noise, health, and other impacts and the team wasn’t answering us fast enough. We thought it was very unfair to the hardworking staff at ABES in particular.”

Still, some community leaders and parent advocates believe that more needs to be done by DCPS and DGS to explain why there were so many communication breakdowns, and work to ensure that the behavior of city officials is improved in the future. “We have strongly urge Mayor Bowser to direct her agencies – DCPS, DGS and DDOT, each of which has specific responsibilities under this project – to meet immediately with the Amidon-Bowen LSAT and incoming ANC-6D03 Commissioner Gail Fast and, thereafter, on a monthly basis until this project is completed,” says Litsky.

Other participants in the LSAT meeting were similarly frustrated with city officials. “As public servants entrusted to serve the DC community, the public servants directly involved with this project not only miserably communicated about the project, but this miscommunication resulted in violating the public’s trust. Violations of the public trust is what results in the erosion of our democratic institutions,” says Kirk Sanders, an ANC 6D03 member who was in the LSAT meeting, and was the target of an insult by DGS.

Science and Industry (COSI), NASA’s meet and greet at Amidon-Bowen was part of the Artemis Learning Lunchbox initiative. It’s a program to “help engage and inspire underserved youth around STEM, highlighting the upside of careers in science which will include the landing the first woman, and first person of color on the moon by 2025,” said Stephen White, Chief Strategy Officer, COSI. Amidon-Bowen was one of several Title 1 schools selected to get the space exploring guests divided amongst several tables to conduct a few simple experiments, namely putting alka seltzer tablets in water to create mini rockets that popped off the tables (some hitting the ceiling). That and the heavy-hitter, dry ice in water – who doesn’t want to play with dry ice (disclaimer: dry ice is not a toy)?

Following the experiments, a select group of students got to ask the astronauts questions about space. The questions ranged from the size of the rockets, how to dodge asteroids or be an astronaut, and one student who deadpanned that it was “too risky” to be an astronaut. As the students shared their thoughts on the event, several students gave me enthusiastic thumbs up punctuated by big smiles. Another deemed it “incredible.”

With the Artemis missions, NASA endeavors to bring a “new generation to the lunar surface to stay.” It will be the first crewed mission to the lunar surface since Apollo 17 in 1972. Artemis 1, an uncrewed test flight of NASA’s new Space Launch System (SLS) and Orion spacecraft, launched in mid November of 2022 returned from its trip around the moon on December 11. Aside from returning earthlings to the moon, the Artemis missions will open the door to a new era of off-planet research, opportunity, and exploration.

“We are thrilled that NASA Administrator Nelson and the four astronauts were able to join us in bringing this learning to the lives of the children and families of Amidon-Bowen. The kids and teachers were very engaged,” said Andy Aichele, Senior Director of Education Engagement, COSI.

It was, indeed, a day that the students at Amidon-Bowen will long remember as they chart their own paths, both on earth or perhaps amongst the stars.
Serve Your City/Ward 6 Mutual Aid Continues Children’s Coat Drive

BY REGINA MAZUR

For more than two years, the mission of Serve Your City/Ward 6 Mutual Aid (SYC/W6MA) has remained the same: providing Black and Brown youth and families with resources that others in DC may already have. Due to the tireless efforts of Serve Your City/Ward 6 Mutual Aid, the community residents can receive the assistance and resources they need.

SYC/W6MA extends a heartfelt thank you to our generous neighbors who’ve been donating winter coats, accessories, and funds to our Winter Coat Drive since early October. The Coat Drive was a huge success. A total of $3,562 was received in donations and used to purchase 78 youth and 70 adult coats. In addition, over 200 coats were donated and more are still being received. A total of 105 children and 92 adults received winter coats as of now, which they so much needed in the cold winter months. This would not be possible without the Southwest community.

As 2022 is coming to an end, our work doesn’t stop. If you didn’t get a chance to contribute to our work on Giving Tuesday, it’s not too late! Your solidarity NOT charity makes mutual aid possible in the future. Keep the abundance flowing in 2023 and beyond by visiting bit.ly/sycw6ma-eoy-22 today.

This Month’s Donation Needs:

SYC/W6MA SW Pod provides our neighbors with food, cleaning supplies, and personal hygiene items. Our greatest needs this month are:

Council Advances Allen’s Transportation Bill Expanding Access to Free Bus Rides

BY SOUTHWESTER STAFF

In December, Ward 6 Councilmember Charles Allen earned unanimous support from City Council colleagues for his “Metro for DC” bill, which sets the stage for free access to Metrobuses departing from any location in the District beginning this summer.

“Today’s vote on this transformational bill shows the District is ready to be a national leader in the future of public transit,” Allen said in a press release. “We will balance making transit a public good with ensuring world-class service continues to return to our metro system. This bill has the support and excitement of District residents, District businesses, the union representing transit workers, and WMATA itself. That’s because it’s going to make a major difference in people’s lives almost immediately when buses become free as soon as July.”

The bill makes all WMATA buses operating in the District free to riders beginning in July 2023 and funds overnight service for 12 major bus lines.

According to statistics provided by the Council’s Office of the Budget Director and cited by Allen’s office, more than two-thirds of bus riders are DC residents, compared with less than half of rail riders who board Metro trains in DC. The data shows bus riders are significantly more likely to be Black or Latino than rail riders, and 68% of DC residents who take the bus have household incomes below $50,000.
